Question 1

You are the senior manager in the internal audit department of Kris Sdn. Bhd, a company involved in timber logging. You report to the chief audit executive and you have six junior internal auditors to supervise, although the budget allows for up to ten junior staff. In a recent meeting with the chief audit executive, the difficulty of staff recruitment and retention was discussed.

Over the past year, five junior internal audit staff have left the company, but only two have been recruited. Recruitment problems identified include location of Kris Sdn. Bhd's head office in rural area in Sabah which is over 150 kilo-meters from the nearest city. In addition the internal auditors job scope requires them to travel extensively but the transportation and infrastructure are often very difficult issues. Together with the chief audit executive, you believe that outsourcing the internal audit department may be a way of alleviating the staffing problems.

You would monitor the new outsourced department in a part-time role taking on additional responsibilities in other departments, and the chief audit executive would accept another post as the Finance Director on the board, replacing the retiring Finance Director.

Two firms have been identified as being able to provide the internal audit service:

– The Netto Outsourcing Services, (Netto Outsourcing) a local firm specialising in the provision of internal audit services. Netto Outsourcing does not audit financial statements or report to members, and – the other option is Grace & Young, Kris Sdn. Bhd's external auditors, who have offices in 80 countries and employ in excess of 75,000 staff.

Required:

(i) Discuss the advantages and disadvantages of appointing Netto Outsourcing Services as internal auditors for Kris Sdn. Bhd.

(8 marks)

(ii) Discuss the issues Grace & Young need to consider before they could accept appointment as internal auditors for Kris Sdn. Bhd.

(7 marks)

(iii) Assume that an outsourcing company has been chosen to provide internal audit services. Describe the control activities that Kris Sdn. Bhd should apply to ensure that the internal audit service is being maintained to a high standard.
